41 DEAD FROM HEAT

The Hospital Doctors Overworked Caring for the Victims—Hottest July 1.

This is the hottest July 1 on record, it being 98 at 3 o'clock. The previous highest figure for this date was 95, in 1872.

Deaths from the heat have been reported steadily to-day, and at 5 o'clock the number of victims was up to the two-score mark.

The prostrations were very numerous and every ambulance that left the various hospitals usually answered two calls.

There is no relief in sight from the awful spell and the Weather Bureau at Washington to-day reported that if it lasted much longer, it would prove a national calamity.

The heat is widespread, being felt intensely in all parts of the country. All who could left the city early. The suffering was intense and hospital doctors think the number of victims may eclipse that of any previous hot spell.

The weather question has become one of very serious import to New York. This was the sixth day of the deadly heat and was the worst of all. Incidentally it was July 1, and the fabled month of blistering heat came in determined to uphold its reputation and put the June record into the shade.

In all the hospitals careful preparations were made for the handling of an unprecedented number of heat victims. A drop of three degrees in the temperature, from 94 to 91, at 3 A. M. was followed by another rise at 5 o'clock, the official figures showing 93. It then jumped to 97, and by 11 o'clock was up to 98.

By noon it had reached 94 and was still climbing. The record for July 1 was broken at 3 o'clock when the mercury reached 98 degrees. The hottest July 1 before to-day was in 1872-73 degrees.

The highest record for any July day in 1873 degrees. That figure was reached on July 1, 1873, and was equalled on July 1, 1893.

The longest period of hot weather in the Weather Bureau records was from June 24 to July 23, 1873, during which time the mercury never went below 90 and frequently ran up to the 97s.

reached by the official figures, it was equalled by the street thermometers, which marked 98 at 3 o'clock. The Weather Bureau record at that hour was 95.

At 4 o'clock it had dropped back to 95.

NEW CUP YACHT IS BEATEN.

Columbia Leads Constitution Home in First Trial.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 1.—The Columbia defeated the Constitution in the first of the N. Y. Y. C. special races off here to-day by about three-fourths of a minute in a thirty-mile run to Windward and return.

There was a fine, whole-sail breeze from the southwest. On the beat to Windward an accident to the Constitution's jib caused her to drop nearly a mile behind, but she pulled up as soon as her canvas was re-set.

On the run in under spinnakers the Constitution gained rapidly and was close on the heels of her rival at the finish line.

The yachts crossed the starting point almost on even terms, but the official time said Columbia crossed at 11.40.34 and Constitution at 11.40.37.

In fifteen-mile beat to Windward Columbia led Constitution all the way and turned the outer mark at 1.25.05. Constitution turned at 1.27.01. After rounding mark both yachts broke out spinnakers to starboard and headed for the finish.

(Special to The Evening World.)

NEWPORT, July 1.—Constitution, the new Herreshoff creation, built at the enormous expense of half a million dollars, by the Belmont syndicate, to defend the America's Cup, was decisively beaten in her first trial race in Narragansett Bay to-day by the old cup champion Columbia. True, Constitution had a slight accident when the put her jib pulled out and the sail flapped useless for five minutes before it was secured and lowered on deck, but at the time of the accident she was not beating Columbia.

With sympathy all against her, Sharron, a competent pressed herself better than she ever has and won a grand race with a bit to spare. She was never handled, her sails set better, she pointed higher into the wind, and, except in running, was as good as or better than the Constitution from every point of view.

A strong opinion exists now that 1890 and more has been wasted. For even if in future races the new boat improves, she will be so little faster than the Columbia that either boat would go to defend the cup.

As one old New York Yacht Club sharp expressed it: "Columbia is fast enough to beat any other yacht in the world, even if Constitution does improve as she grows older."

It was an ideal trial race. The gentle squall that scarcely rippled the surface of the upper bay early in the morning increased in strength every hour.

By the time the big fleet reached the starting point off Breton's Reef it was a fresh breeze.

Promptly at 11.30 the Constitution and Columbia were sent away on their journey, fifteen miles to windward and return. They almost darkened the sky with clouds of canvas aloft. Each had set mainsails, staysail, jib, baby jib, top-sail and clubtopsail. In the maneuvering back of the line Capt. Barr outfoxed Rhodes, his rival, and got the weather berth. They crossed the line with every inch of canvas drawing like a length in the lead and to windward.

Barr was holding Columbia up into the very eye of the wind. Constitution was taking it on a broader tack, but was falling away to leeward fast. Barr was missing the slightest chance to slide his boat up to windward while Constitution slid to leeward as fast as she drew further ahead on a line.

Buckley, leather, No. 26 Gold street.

WOULDN'T PAY FOR PARK SEAT.

Cohen Was Arrested for Refusing and Heim for a Laugh.

Abraham Cohen, eighteen years old, of No. 165 Broome street, was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court this morning charged with disorderly conduct, and Martin Heim, fifty years old, of No. 348 Sixth avenue, was charged with interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty.

Policeman Louis Lues, of the Tenderloin station, said that the boy was causing a crowd to collect by sitting in one of the chairs in Madison Square and refusing to pay for it, and that he also refused to vacate the chair when ordered to do so by the attendant and by the policeman.

Cohen said that it had been his custom for two years to sit in the park, and he had never been asked to pay before, and he did not know that anybody had a right to make him pay five cents for sitting in a public park.

"I would rather have the benches any how, Judge," he said. "We used to have a whole bench free. They have moved all the benches out into the sun and the chairs are placed in the shade of the park."

"When the policeman told me to sit on a bench I told him to bring me the bench and I would do so. He then told me to go to a warmer climate than this, and I told him that if he would take the chair away I would sit on the grass, that all I wanted was to sit in the shade and cool off a little."

Heim said there were a thousand people around the officer and the boy, and when he learned the cause of the disturbance he could not keep from laughing.

"I reckon the officer thought I was laughing at him," said Mr. Heim, "and he took me to the station. I think it was funny yet," and he went off into another fit of laughing, which made the court-room ring.

Even Magistrate Mayo could not suppress a smile, as he discharged both prisoners.

POLO GROUNDS, July 1.—"If this weather keeps up there won't be enough ginger left in us to stock a Quaker camp-meeting," said Kip Selbach, as he mopped his brow and wondered how his system came to contain so much liquid matter. "Hot? Why, this isn't a marker to what we'll get in St. Louis. If the weather man out there deals us his usual sample of July weather, you'll think this old town is an ideal summer resort," was the retort of Grandpa Van Hatten.

At this bit of information Selbach heaved a sigh and headed for the water cooler; then the whole bunch lay down in the shade of the grand stand to ponder on the drawbacks in a ball player's career.

It was sizzling hot to-day at the Marston lot. The players moped around after the fashion of New Mexico "Greasers" when the mercury shows 115 in the shade. It was too hot to play, too hot to enthrone, too hot to do anything but sit still, with as few clothes on as the conventionalities would permit, and watch the players perspire through a dopy game.

"I can understand how a chunky chap like Selbach can stand plenty of wilting out," remarked a fat fan in the stand, "but it seems to me that if Spider Nelson has to stew for a few days more

CREW OF FIVE LOST ON FERN.

Tug Founders in Thirty Feet of Water—All Drowned.

DETROIT, Mich., July 1.—A special to the News from Eagle River, via Houghton, Mich., says the tug Fern, of Algona, Mich., foundered off there Saturday morning.

She carried a crew of five men, all of whom are lost. Three were from Algona and the other two were Frank Johnson, of this place, and Will Anderson, of Eagle Harbor.

The bodies are supposed to be in the boat, which lies in thirty feet of water.

LIGHTNING BOLT KILLS TWELVE.

Of Party of 13 Fishermen Only Boy Recovers.

CHICAGO, July 1.—Twelve men were killed and a boy probably fatally injured this afternoon by a single bolt of lightning.

The victims were fishing in Lake Michigan at the foot of Montrose Boulevard, on the North Side.

The fatal bolt struck the pier where they were seated and all were thrown into the lake.

CLERK LYMAN RESIGNS.

Judge Brown Appoints Thomas Alexander in His Place.

United States Commissioner Samuel H. Lyman, clerk of the United States District Court, tendered his resignation to-day to Judge Brown. The resignation was accepted, and Judge Brown appointed Commissioner Thomas Alexander, the present deputy clerk, as clerk to succeed Mr. Lyman.

Mr. Lyman was born in Ohio in 1825. He was the third person to have died the position during the last half century. He was appointed by Judge Chase in October, 1878, and resigned because of ill health. He said he had no definite plans for the future.

Nelson and Bernard Go.

The management of the New York Club this morning released second baseman Nelson and outfielder Bernard.

Buelow's release has been recalled. He injured knee is mending fast, and he will be ready for regular work when the team starts west. This leaves sixteen players on the club's payroll, as follows: Five pitchers, three catchers, four infielders, three outfielders, one substitute.

Too Hot for Fans.

The sweltering weather kept the crowd down to slim proportions. The fans would be glad to cheer the Giants on, for Davis's busters have been playing good ball, and they make their last local appearance for three weeks to-morrow, but "Old Sol" has driven most of them to cover or the seashore.

The sun seats were very nearly deserted to-day and only a few hundred people stayed in the stand.

The weather was alone responsible for the slim attendance, for the team has kept up its winning clip in the last two weeks.

Manager Dave, at the last moment decided to give infielder Buelow a work
